

Optimal tools?

Do you have total control over your tools?

Do your software developers have the most effective tools at their disposal? Do they have effective design tools, a decent source editor, good build tools, debugger, continuous build system, framework for unit testing, revision control and issue management that all supports and help the way they develop?

At Purple Scout we have been helping our clients for the last six years to make their software development process more efficient by using the right tools and processes for the job at hand. We have seen that in some cases our customers spend up to 10% of their development resources to maintain and improve the software tools used to develop software. In 9 cases out of 10 it is developers that are hired to develop something else than tools that are used.

Based on this, we have packaged a one day workshop to help our customers better understand the current issues with their tools setup and the possible improvement areas (see information to the right).

By using our one day expert you will, in the end, get a more efficient development environment, happier developers and finally a piece of software with higher quality to a lower price.

The one day expert?

Our one day package includes a full day with one of our senior software tools consultants. During the day the consultant interviews developers and covers the whole tool suite at your company. After that, analysis together with SWAT teams at our office takes place and we delivers a report with highlights on the current situation and what can be improved to increase development productivity and quality.

At Purple Scout, we go the extra mile for our employees and customers. Our customers know that our industry leading Open Source experts stop at nothing to create the ideal solution for their project. Our employees know that we always listen to what they have to say and do our best to create an ideal work atmosphere. Speaking of atmosphere, who else offers their employees sky diving as part of personal development?
